

9/11 FADING IN MEMORY

BY: Mindy Rader, Rockland Post Contributor

As we once again approach the anniversary of the 9/11 attacks, we see a country that is fundamentally changed. Many people now living were not born at the time of the attacks. Many don't even know who attacked us or why? We can blame it on a failure of the educational system in this country that does not teach the fundamentals of American History. Even worse, they do not teach what happened on that day and why? They did not learn who America's enemies were.

We have either elected or running candidates who blame 9/11 on the United States. At the time of 9/11 Islamophobia was condemned while at the same time people in large parts of the world were celebrating the deaths of Americans. Today, the people who celebrated 9/11 sit in the halls of power, in the US Congress and in the Mayor's chair of New York City. The Mayor's chief legal counsel is a man who defended 9/11 terrorists and shares their beliefs. How do we go to a city like NY from pure liberal ideology to radical ideology in one election? How has NY forgotten that 3000 of its citizens died and replaced the Mayor's post with someone who is both antisemitic and who hates America? There are petitions, thousands of signatures, asking him to stay away from 9/11 but I'm sure his arrogant simile will not.

There is a Senate candidate in Michigan who is friends with a blogger/ influencer who once again celebrates 9/11 and spews antisemitic and anti-American rhetoric. I must ask our fellow citizens, our fellow democrats, at what point does the tent become so big that it blows out its sides and collapses and with it the American dream?

Again, I blame this on the educational system. Instead of focusing on progress the American society, we develop false narratives as to what it was. No, no society is ever perfect. But ours is better than most. Slavery did not begin and end in the United States. It's a sad, sick, behavior that dates to the earliest civilizations. But we did fight a war and hundreds of thousands died to end it. This country saved us from the Nazis, from Communism, and a lot of other ideologies which impinged on human freedom.

And finally, maybe that's the true story of 9/11. People died because other people wanted to deprive us of our freedoms. They wanted to impose their will and their ideals on us. Now they do it serendipitously by getting themselves elected to our Congress. Our educational system has failed us. Keep the masses dumb and feeding them propaganda on social media. That's seemingly the way of the left. Remember, not every dictatorship occurs by revolution. Some are voted in. We need to understand who our enemies are and do what we have to do to preserve the country. It's like the frog boiling in the pot, boiling the frog slowly and he never realizes he is dying. Let's hope on the anniversary of 9/11 we wake up and realize that by voting for these people and allowing their vicious ideas to spread on the internet the frog gets out of the pot before it dies with the frog being the United States and our freedoms.
